

SOCIETY

Phone 7-8431 Between 8 A. M. and 4 P. M.

Calendar

Monday, July 20
The W. M. B. of the First Baptist Church will meet in Circle Monday at 7:30 p.m. with Mrs. W. B. Mason. The Hazel Society will meet at 8 o'clock with Mrs. W. B. Mason. The Annie House will meet at 8:30 a.m. with Mrs. Leo Ray. The Amanda Tinkle will meet with Mrs. Perry Mason at 3 p.m.

Miss Murphy Entertained With Breakfast Thursday

Miss Mary Lou Moore entertained with a breakfast Thursday morning at 9 o'clock at the Barlow Hotel for the pleasure of Miss Betty Murphy, bride-elect of Joseph Louis Marshall.

Miss Murphy who wore a long, elegant dress of white tulle, was accompanied by a carriage of white

A-Weapons May Be Used in Korean War

WASHINGTON (UP) — A major effort to defeat the Communists with atomic weapons is a possibility if they start to continue the Korean war instead of signing an armistice.

Plans for launching large scale use of atomic weapons were prepared by the Pentagon last week prior to the recent series of three talks, military sources revealed today.

President Eisenhower has sole authority under the law to order use of atomic weapons in war.

The joint chiefs of staff did not recommend for or against the plans, prepared chiefly by Air Force staff officers. They presented the plans to civilian authorities.

It was said, as one of several sources that could be taken against the Communists.

Implicit was the fact that the United States has ample stocks of atomic weapons of varying sizes and adequate air power to deliver them.

There is reason to believe, however, sources said, that the National Security Council considered the possibility, including risks of broadening the war, and either rejected the idea at that time or put off a decision.

The possibility of an atomic offensive was under study simultaneously with a number of other sources based on studies here and at Gen. Mark Clark's Far East command headquarters in Tokyo.

The possible causes, any or all of which could become active again if a truce fails, included a frontal attack to drive the Reds to the Yalu River on the northern border of Manchuria, and

wind of Korea, amphibious landings in China blockade.

The possibility of an atomic offensive was under study simultaneously with a number of other sources based on studies here and at Gen. Mark Clark's Far East command headquarters in Tokyo.

The possible causes, any or all of which could become active again if a truce fails, included a frontal attack to drive the Reds to the Yalu River on the northern border of Manchuria, and

wind of Korea, amphibious landings in China blockade.

The possibility of an atomic offensive was under study simultaneously with a number of other sources based on studies here and at Gen. Mark Clark's Far East command headquarters in Tokyo.

The possible causes, any or all of which could become active again if a truce fails, included a frontal attack to drive the Reds to the Yalu River on the northern border of Manchuria, and

wind of Korea, amphibious landings in China blockade.

The possibility of an atomic offensive was under study simultaneously with a number of other sources based on studies here and at Gen. Mark Clark's Far East command headquarters in Tokyo.

The possible causes, any or all of which could become active again if a truce fails, included a frontal attack to drive the Reds to the Yalu River on the northern border of Manchuria, and

wind of Korea, amphibious landings in China blockade.

The possibility of an atomic offensive was under study simultaneously with a number of other sources based on studies here and at Gen. Mark Clark's Far East command headquarters in Tokyo.

The possible causes, any or all of which could become active again if a truce fails, included a frontal attack to drive the Reds to the Yalu River on the northern border of Manchuria, and

wind of Korea, amphibious landings in China blockade.

The possibility of an atomic offensive was under study simultaneously with a number of other sources based on studies here and at Gen. Mark Clark's Far East command headquarters in Tokyo.

The possible causes, any or all of which could become active again if a truce fails, included a frontal attack to drive the Reds to the Yalu River on the northern border of Manchuria, and

wind of Korea, amphibious landings in China blockade.

The possibility of an atomic offensive was under study simultaneously with a number of other sources based on studies here and at Gen. Mark Clark's Far East command headquarters in Tokyo.

The possible causes, any or all of which could become active again if a truce fails, included a frontal attack to drive the Reds to the Yalu River on the northern border of Manchuria, and

wind of Korea, amphibious landings in China blockade.

The possibility of an atomic offensive was under study simultaneously with a number of other sources based on studies here and at Gen. Mark Clark's Far East command headquarters in Tokyo.

The possible causes, any or all of which could become active again if a truce fails, included a frontal attack to drive the Reds to the Yalu River on the northern border of Manchuria, and

wind of Korea, amphibious landings in China blockade.

The possibility of an atomic offensive was under study simultaneously with a number of other sources based on studies here and at Gen. Mark Clark's Far East command headquarters in Tokyo.

The possible causes, any or all of which could become active again if a truce fails, included a frontal attack to drive the Reds to the Yalu River on the northern border of Manchuria, and

wind of Korea, amphibious landings in China blockade.

The possibility of an atomic offensive was under study simultaneously with a number of other sources based on studies here and at Gen. Mark Clark's Far East command headquarters in Tokyo.

The possible causes, any or all of which could become active again if a truce fails, included a frontal attack to drive the Reds to the Yalu River on the northern border of Manchuria, and

wind of Korea, amphibious landings in China blockade.

The possibility of an atomic offensive was under study simultaneously with a number of other sources based on studies here and at Gen. Mark Clark's Far East command headquarters in Tokyo.

The possible causes, any or all of which could become active again if a truce fails, included a frontal attack to drive the Reds to the Yalu River on the northern border of Manchuria, and

wind of Korea, amphibious landings in China blockade.

The possibility of an atomic offensive was under study simultaneously with a number of other sources based on studies here and at Gen. Mark Clark's Far East command headquarters in Tokyo.

The possible causes, any or all of which could become active again if a truce fails, included a frontal attack to drive the Reds to the Yalu River on the northern border of Manchuria, and

wind of Korea, amphibious landings in China blockade.

The possibility of an atomic offensive was under study simultaneously with a number of other sources based on studies here and at Gen. Mark Clark's Far East command headquarters in Tokyo.

The possible causes, any or all of which could become active again if a truce fails, included a frontal attack to drive the Reds to the Yalu River on the northern border of Manchuria, and

wind of Korea, amphibious landings in China blockade.

The possibility of an atomic offensive was under study simultaneously with a number of other sources based on studies here and at Gen. Mark Clark's Far East command headquarters in Tokyo.

The possible causes, any or all of which could become active again if a truce fails, included a frontal attack to drive the Reds to the Yalu River on the northern border of Manchuria, and

wind of Korea, amphibious landings in China blockade.

The possibility of an atomic offensive was under study simultaneously with a number of other sources based on studies here and at Gen. Mark Clark's Far East command headquarters in Tokyo.

The possible causes, any or all of which could become active again if a truce fails, included a frontal attack to drive the Reds to the Yalu River on the northern border of Manchuria, and

wind of Korea, amphibious landings in China blockade.

The possibility of an atomic offensive was under study simultaneously with a number of other sources based on studies here and at Gen. Mark Clark's Far East command headquarters in Tokyo.

The possible causes, any or all of which could become active again if a truce fails, included a frontal attack to drive the Reds to the Yalu River on the northern border of Manchuria, and

wind of Korea, amphibious landings in China blockade.

The story of a really good black crepe dress is told simply in the terms of a good designer. This one for fall (left) by Ben Heig is two-piece with narrow skirt. Black bone buttons appear at neckline and are repeated at midriff in group of four. Trim is grosgrain; hip banding is faille. Late day dress (right) by Herbert Sondheim is taupe mat jersey with long, glove-like sleeves and bodice that's tucked and draped. Skirt is very full, very fluid.

This new mop and a bucket of lukewarm water makes washing the family car much easier and less messy. The removable mop head is made of spongy cellulose yarn and the four-foot handle reaches any car top without effort.

PRESCOTT NEWS

Monday, July 20
The Christian Women's Fellowship of the First Christian Church will meet Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the home of Mrs. Benny D. Stovall. All ladies of the church are urged to attend.

The Woman's Association of the First Presbyterian Church will meet Monday evening in the home of Mrs. Robbie Wilson with Mrs. John William Davis co-hostess for the July meeting.

DeMolay Chapter to Sponsor Movie Sunday
Prescott Chapter, Order of DeMolay, is sponsoring a movie at the Gem Theater here Sunday and Monday, July 19 and 20.

The special movie will feature Eve Arden of "Our Miss Brooks" radio fame in "The Lady Wants Mink" with Dennis O'Keefe.

Sunday matinee will open at 2 p.m. and the evening show will begin at 8:30 p.m. Monday's showing will be at 7 p.m.

Mrs. Tom Bemis Hostess to '37 Club
The home of Mrs. Tom Bemis was decorated with arrangements of zinnias and roses placed at vantage points when she entertained the members of the '37 Contract Club Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Frank Gilbert won high score award.

At the conclusion of the games a dainty salad course was served.

Guests for the afternoon included Mrs. Dallas Atkins, Mrs. Vernon Buchanan, Mrs. C. R. Gray, Mrs. Charlie Scott, Mrs. Edward Bryson, Mrs. H. H. McKenzie and Mrs. J. T. Worthington. Members present were Mrs. O. G. Hirst, Mrs. C. D. McSwain, Mrs. D. J. McKee, Jr., Mrs. Mark Justice, Mrs. Dan Pittman, Jr., Mrs. Art Regalier, Mrs. Archie Johnson and Mrs. J. R. Bemis.

B&PW Committee Chairman Appointed
Twenty three members of the Prescott Business and Professional Women's Club attended a dinner and business meeting Tuesday evening at the Hotel Lawson.

Mrs. Jess Hays, president, presided and the following committee chairmen were appointed:

Education and Vocations, Mrs. Vernice Hubbard

Finances, Mrs. Lottie Reiff

Health and safety, Miss Fay Loomis

Legislation, Mrs. Myra Hamby

Membership, Mrs. Elveta Wells

News Service, Mrs. Marie Chelbert

Program Co-ordination, Mrs. Beas Gist

Public Affairs, Mrs. Violet Cox

Radio and Television, Miss Margaret Avery

National Security, Mrs. Thelma Kizer

Historian, Mrs. Robbie Wilson

Reporter, Mrs. Alleen Cooper

Mrs. Hamby and Miss Avery gave interesting reports on the recent National Convention.

Miss Sandra Fay Andrews of Memphis is guest of her aunt, Mrs. J. T. McKee and Mr. McKee.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Hubbard have as guests this week their nieces, Jane, Carolyn and Elizabeth, daughters of Hot Springs.

Mrs. Pat Combs spent Tuesday and Wednesday in Little Rock as guests of Mrs. Matt Hitt.

Mrs. J. B. Standorfer and son of Little Rock were guests Tuesday of her mother, Mrs. Burke Shelton.

Ricky and Pamela Parham of Camden have returned home after a visit with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Gordon.

Miss Frances Bailey is spending ten days in Columbia, Tenn., as guest of her sister, Mrs. Walter Munteast and family.

Mr. and Mrs. John Eagle and guest, Mrs. Mollie Kirby of Bakersfield, Calif., have returned from Bastrop, La., where they attended funeral services for their nephew, Billy G. Green.

Miss Virginia Johnson has as her guest, Miss Kathryn Sue Lemmerhust of Texarkana.

Friends of H. B. DeFamar will regret that he is seriously ill.

Negro Given Pardon for Old Crime

LITTLE ROCK (UP) — A Negro night club entertainer who claims he can sing in 12 languages was pardoned yesterday by Gov. Francis Cherry for a crime he was convicted of in 1919.

Arnold B. Wiley wrote Gov. Cherry that he couldn't get permanent employment in New York as long as the old Arkansas conviction stood.

At first Wiley said he thought he had been pardoned from a 1919 Mornie County larceny conviction. But the Negro — who learned his languages while in prison — said he later discovered his three-year sentence had been only commuted. It was commuted by then Gov. Charles H. Brough and Wiley was released from prison in May, 1920.

The Negro said he had been in hot water with New York City police because of the conviction and added he couldn't get more than a three-month permit to work in a liquor-selling club.

Less Cattle Marketed, and Meat Rises

CHICAGO (UP) — Housewives will get a lesson in the law of supply and demand as meat prices in the corner butcher shop rise in the next two weeks, experts said today.

With all controls removed, prices were fluctuating rapidly at the nation's largest livestock slaughter yards as the supply varied from day to day.

Mostly, however, the number of cattle shipped by farmers was getting smaller each day. As a result, the general trend of prices was upward with average increases ranging from 50 cents to 2.50 a day for each hundred pounds of weight carried by the animal.

Yesterday was an exception. Farmers, anxious to take advantage of the rising prices, sent cattle to market in record numbers.

The law of supply and demand went into its reverse action and prices dropped as much as $2.50 at Chicago and $1 to $1.50 at Omaha and Sioux City.

Experts warned, however, that the general upward trend probably would be resumed almost immediately. Housewives, they said, could expect higher prices in their retail shops within two weeks.

The prices began their upward march at the end of last week.

All observers agreed that the upward trend came from:

1. — Government aid to drought stricken cattle producers and ranchers that fell in some parts of the area. Both served to "hearten" the cattlemen and reduced the flow of premature cattle to the market.

2. — A normal mid summer shortage which appears every year when corn fed cattle begin to disappear from the market and western grass fed animals have not yet appeared in full numbers.

3. — The law of supply and demand.

With all controls removed, prices were fluctuating rapidly at the nation's largest livestock slaughter yards as the supply varied from day to day.

Mostly, however, the number of cattle shipped by farmers was getting smaller each day. As a result, the general trend of prices was upward with average increases ranging from 50 cents to 2.50 a day for each hundred pounds of weight carried by the animal.

Yesterday was an exception. Farmers, anxious to take advantage of the rising prices, sent cattle to market in record numbers.

The law of supply and demand went into its reverse action and prices dropped as much as $2.50 at Chicago and $1 to $1.50 at Omaha and Sioux City.

Experts warned, however, that the general upward trend probably would be resumed almost immediately. Housewives, they said, could expect higher prices in their retail shops within two weeks.

The prices began their upward march at the end of last week.

All observers agreed that the upward trend came from:

1. — Government aid to drought stricken cattle producers and ranchers that fell in some parts of the area. Both served to "hearten" the cattlemen and reduced the flow of premature cattle to the market.

2. — A normal mid summer shortage which appears every year when corn fed cattle begin to disappear from the market and western grass fed animals have not yet appeared in full numbers.

3. — The law of supply and demand.

With all controls removed, prices were fluctuating rapidly at the nation's largest livestock slaughter yards as the supply varied from day to day.

Mostly, however, the number of cattle shipped by farmers was getting smaller each day. As a result, the general trend of prices was upward with average increases ranging from 50 cents to 2.50 a day for each hundred pounds of weight carried by the animal.

Yesterday was an exception. Farmers, anxious to take advantage of the rising prices, sent cattle to market in record numbers.

The law of supply and demand went into its reverse action and prices dropped as much as $2.50 at Chicago and $1 to $1.50 at Omaha and Sioux City.

Experts warned, however, that the general upward trend probably would be resumed almost immediately. Housewives, they said, could expect higher prices in their retail shops within two weeks.

The prices began their upward march at the end of last week.

All observers agreed that the upward trend came from:

1. — Government aid to drought stricken cattle producers and ranchers that fell in some parts of the area. Both served to "hearten" the cattlemen and reduced the flow of premature cattle to the market.

2. — A normal mid summer shortage which appears every year when corn fed cattle begin to disappear from the market and western grass fed animals have not yet appeared in full numbers.

3. — The law of supply and demand.

DOROTHY DIX

Her "Last Chance"

Dear Miss Dix: Eight years ago when I was married, I knew my husband did not love me. He was desperate with grief and loneliness over the death of his first wife. I had known him well years before, and frankly, I figured this was my "last chance." He was 30, and I was 38. I told myself it would work out, but almost from the beginning I knew I had made a mistake. About two years ago he told me he had fallen in love and asked for his freedom. Although I knew the other woman was a fine person and would undoubtedly be a good wife to him, my pride was badly hurt and I refused him flatly. As you can imagine, this has been an unhappy house since. Am I right in hanging on to him? We have no children.

Only a Comforting Interlude
Answer: There really doesn't seem much chance of happiness for either of you together. Yours was a loveless marriage; you mention that your husband didn't love you, and you strongly imply that your feeling for him wasn't too deep emotionally. He should have had a longer period of readjustment after his first wife's death, before considering second marriage, but that's a mistake that many grief-stricken widowers do make. If there's nothing at all holding you together, except your own hurt pride, you'd better let him go. Try separation for a while and see if he still wants his freedom. Talk the matter over with your clergyman before making a final decision. Your marriage certainly has not been entirely wasted. You provided a very comforting interlude and perhaps saved him from a much more tragic marriage. You made an honest and sincere effort to create a happy home, and the fact that you failed isn't your fault entirely. Marriage without mutual love seldom is successful; there's always the possibility that one or the other partner will eventually fall in love with someone else. It's fortunate for you that the turn of events will leave you with hurt pride rather than a broken heart.

Dear Miss Dix: I am very concerned about my best friend Hilda. We are both 16, and while I am interested in boys, she says she isn't. I have coaxed her to date with me, but she refuses. She claims she'd rather be home listening to the radio. She's pretty, too, which makes it all the more strange.

Answer: Hilda is probably just a bit slower in getting around to the boy-friend stage than you were. Give her time, and stop worrying over her. The fact that at 16 a girl doesn't care for dates isn't proof positive that she'll always be that way. Suddenly, she'll meet a boy who attracts her, and your worries will be over. In the meantime, don't try to run other people's lives for them.

Dear Miss Dix: What can you do with a middle-aged woman who asks personal questions and wants to know everybody's business?

AGNES E.
Answer: Ignore her as much as possible, and meet embarrassing questions with the simple statement that you prefer not to discuss the matter. Lonely people often feel that their own loneliness will be assuaged if they can reach into the lives of others. The course is certainly to be discouraged, since it defeats its own purpose. Discretion, rather than intrusion, is the friend-winner.

Dear Miss Dix: I'm 20 years old, and have been dating a boy for three years. He is in service, and though he has given me a ring, and we originally planned our wedding for this summer, he now says he prefers to wait until his period of service is ended. Should I wait or forget him?

BROWN EYES
Answer: If you love the boy — wait; if you prefer good times in the immediate present, to a life of marriage in the future — give him up.

Released by Bell Syndicate, Inc.

Dear Miss Dix: I am very concerned about my best friend Hilda. We are both 16, and while I am interested in boys, she says she isn't. I have coaxed her to date with me, but she refuses. She claims she'd rather be home listening to the radio. She's pretty, too, which makes it all the more strange.

Answer: Hilda is probably just a bit slower in getting around to the boy-friend stage than you were. Give her time, and stop worrying over her. The fact that at 16 a girl doesn't care for dates isn't proof positive that she'll always be that way. Suddenly, she'll meet a boy who attracts her, and your worries will be over. In the meantime, don't try to run other people's lives for them.

Dear Miss Dix: What can you do with a middle-aged woman who asks personal questions and wants to know everybody's business?

AGNES E.
Answer: Ignore her as much as possible, and meet embarrassing questions with the simple statement that you prefer not to discuss the matter. Lonely people often feel that their own loneliness will be assuaged if they can reach into the lives of others. The course is certainly to be discouraged, since it defeats its own purpose. Discretion, rather than intrusion, is the friend-winner.

Dear Miss Dix: I'm 20 years old, and have been dating a boy for three years. He is in service, and though he has given me a ring, and we originally planned our wedding for this summer, he now says he prefers to wait until his period of service is ended. Should I wait or forget him?

BROWN EYES
Answer: If you love the boy — wait; if you prefer good times in the immediate present, to a life of marriage in the future — give him up.

Released by Bell Syndicate, Inc.

Dear Miss Dix: I am very concerned about my best friend Hilda. We are both 16, and while I am interested in boys, she says she isn't. I have coaxed her to date with me, but she refuses. She claims she'd rather be home listening to the radio. She's pretty, too, which makes it all the more strange.

Answer: Hilda is probably just a bit slower in getting around to the boy-friend stage than you were. Give her time, and stop worrying over her. The fact that at 16 a girl doesn't care for dates isn't proof positive that she'll always be that way. Suddenly, she'll meet a boy who attracts her, and your worries will be over. In the meantime, don't try to run other people's lives for them.

Dear Miss Dix: What can you do with a middle-aged woman who asks personal questions and wants to know everybody's business?

AGNES E.
Answer: Ignore her as much as possible, and meet embarrassing questions with the simple statement that you prefer not to discuss the matter. Lonely people often feel that their own loneliness will be assuaged if they can reach into the lives of others. The course is certainly to be discouraged, since it defeats its own purpose. Discretion, rather than intrusion, is the friend-winner.

Dear Miss Dix: I'm 20 years old, and have been dating a boy for three years. He is in service, and though he has given me a ring, and we originally planned our wedding for this summer, he now says he prefers to wait until his period of service is ended. Should I wait or forget him?

BROWN EYES
Answer: If you love the boy — wait; if you prefer good times in the immediate present, to a life of marriage in the future — give him up.

Released by Bell Syndicate, Inc.

Dear Miss Dix: I am very concerned about my best friend Hilda. We are both 16, and while I am interested in boys, she says she isn't. I have coaxed her to date with me, but she refuses. She claims she'd rather be home listening to the radio. She's pretty, too, which makes it all the more strange.

Answer: Hilda is probably just a bit slower in getting around to the boy-friend stage than you were. Give her time, and stop worrying over her. The fact that at 16 a girl doesn't care for dates isn't proof positive that she'll always be that way. Suddenly, she'll meet a boy who attracts her, and your worries will be over. In the meantime, don't try to run other people's lives for them.

Dear Miss Dix: What can you do with a middle-aged woman who asks personal questions and wants to know everybody's business?

AGNES E.
Answer: Ignore her as much as possible, and meet embarrassing questions with the simple statement that you prefer not to discuss the matter. Lonely people often feel that their own loneliness will be assuaged if they can reach into the lives of others. The course is certainly to be discouraged, since it defeats its own purpose. Discretion, rather than intrusion, is the friend-winner.

Dear Miss Dix: I'm 20 years old, and have been dating a boy for three years. He is in service, and though he has given me a ring, and we originally planned our wedding for this summer, he now says he prefers to wait until his period of service is ended. Should I wait or forget him?

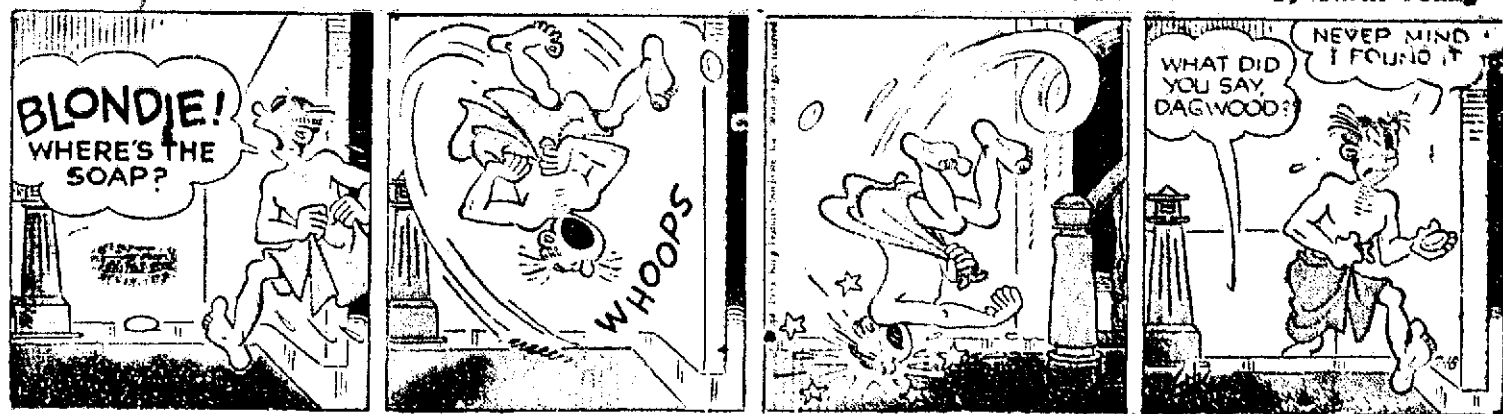

BROWN EYES
Answer: If you love the boy — wait; if you prefer good times in the immediate present, to a life of marriage in the future — give him up.

Released by Bell Syndicate, Inc.

Dear Miss Dix: I am very concerned about my best friend Hilda. We are both 16, and while I am interested in boys, she says she isn't. I have coaxed her to date with me, but she refuses. She claims she'd rather be home listening to the radio. She's pretty, too, which makes it all the more strange.

Answer: Hilda is probably just a bit slower in getting around to the boy-friend stage than you were. Give her time, and stop worrying over her. The fact that at 16 a girl doesn't care for dates isn't proof positive that she'll always be that way. Suddenly, she'll meet a boy who attracts her, and your worries will be over. In the meantime, don't try to run other people's lives for them.

BLONDIE

OZARK IKE

British Federation

- ACROSS
- British federation in the Far East
 - Kuala Lumpur is its capital
 - Speaker
 - Enzyming
 - It is in the
 - Binds anew
 - Distinguished service cross (ab.)
 - John (Gaelic)
 - Type of World War II boat
 - Puts out of office
 - Poems
 - Book of maps
 - Winged
 - Net
 - Lukewarm
 - Pester
 - Artist's frame
 - Asseverated
 - Correlative of creditors
 - Fairy fort
 - Separate column
 - Army post office (ab.)
 - Form a notion
 - Evader
 - Synonym
 - Revolve
 - Belows
 - Solid (comb. form)
- DOWN
- Disposition
 - Arrivals (ab.)
 - Secular
 - Consumed

Answer to Previous Puzzle

ACROSS
1. British
2. Kuala Lumpur
3. Speaker
4. Enzyming
5. It is in the
6. Binds anew
7. Distinguished service cross (ab.)
8. John (Gaelic)
9. Type of World War II boat
10. Puts out of office
11. Poems
12. Book of maps
13. Winged
14. Net
15. Lukewarm
16. Pester
17. Artist's frame
18. Asseverated
19. Correlative of creditors
20. Fairy fort
21. Separate column
22. Army post office (ab.)
23. Form a notion
24. Evader
25. Synonym
26. Revolve
27. Belows
28. Solid (comb. form)

DOWN
1. Disposition
2. Arrivals (ab.)
3. Secular
4. Consumed

OUT OUR WAY

By J. R. Williams

OUR BOARDING HOUSE

With Motor Hoops

FUNNY BUSINESS

By Herschberger

"One of these bills is for $75 for that lamp so you can read the bills easier!"

HENRY

By Carl Anderson

"HI - SLAVE! HA HA!"

VIC FLINT

By Michael O'Malley and Ralph Lane

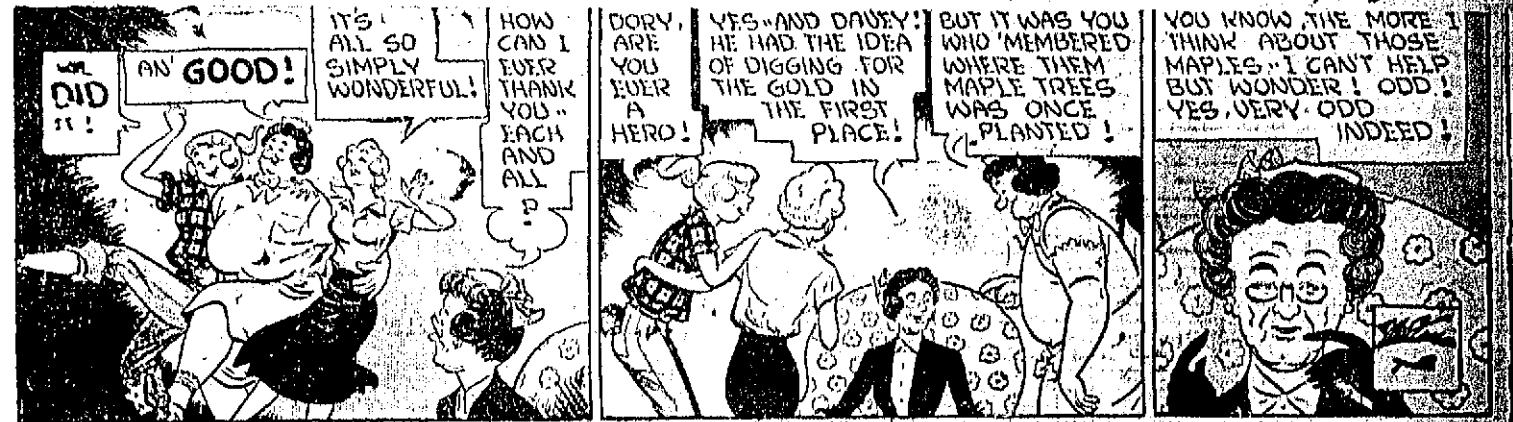

WASH TUBBS

By Leslie Turner

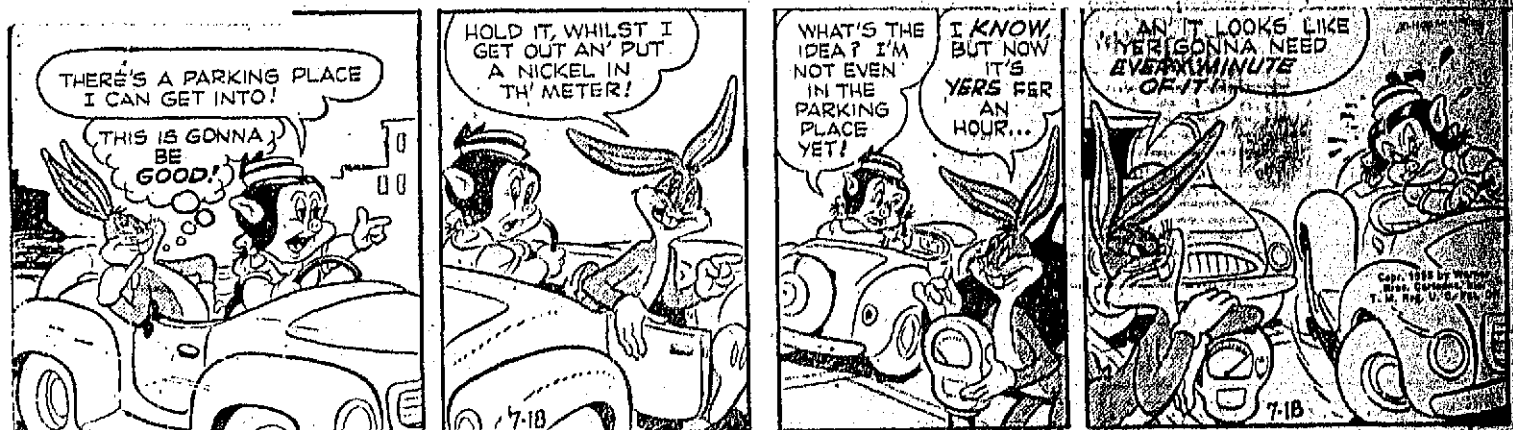

BOOTS AND HER BUDDIES

By Edgar Martin

BOGS BUNNY

ALLEY OOP

By V. T. Hamlin

CHRIS WELKIN, Planeteer

By Russ Winterbotham

THE STORY OF MARTHA WAYNE

By Wilson Scruggs

CARNIVAL

By Dick Turner

"One of the nicest things about roughing it at Lake Ripple lodge is that they insist you dress formal for dinner!"

SIDE GLANCES

By Galbraith

"NATIONAL PARKS"

